Paragliding

Join us in a fundraising campaign to sail&climb the highest peak in the Arctic, "Gunnbjørn Fjeld" (12.119 ft / 3.694 m), and be one of the first to paraglide from the summit.

Expedition

Fundraising campaign

The fundraising campaign comprises a distance in meters covered under fair means (sailing, climbing, paragliding) undertaken by each member and repeated annually. All the funds raised will be used to found an annual outdoor sports camp combined with environmental education for young Inuits in the region and to collaborate with other organizations.

Gunnbjørn Fjeld

Gunnbjørn Fjeld | Hvitserk

12,119 ft | 3,694 m

Gunnbjørn Fjeld (referred to Hvitserk in the Icelandic myth, literally meaning "white shirt") is Greenland's highest mountain & the highest mountain around 155 miles north of the Arctic Circle.

Name

Gunnbjørn Ulfsson

It is named after Gunnbjørn Ulfsson, the first Viking to have sighted Greenland in around 875 according to legend.

Watkins Range

Watkins Bjerge (Danish)

The Watkins Range is Greenland's highest mountain range in the southeast of Greenland. The mountain range includes the ten highest peaks of the Arctic.

First ascent

16 August 1935

Gunnbjørn Fjeld was first climbed on 16 August 1935 by Augustine Courtauld, Jack Longland, Ebbe Munck, Harold G. Wager, and Lawrence Wager. Due to the extremely inaccessible nature of the region, ascents are rare: the second ascent only took place in 1971 and the third in 1987.
